dicted for some years past, and Russia's present warning cannot but be regarded as bringing the prediction nearer realization. It is, indeed, not beyond the bounds of credibility that Japan may have intended from the outset to provoke such a warning in order to bring matters between Russia and herself to a head. It is considered in many quarters that as things stand at present Japan would have a fair chance of emerging victorious from a conflict with the Colossus of the North, but that if the war be postponed until after the completion of the Siberian and Manchurian railways and the consolidation of the Russian position she would be placed at an almost hopeless disadvantage. If that theory be accepted by Japan it would constitute a very good reason for precipitating a quarrel, supposing her to be regarded as sooner or later inevitable. The other Powers, however, might object to having the peace of the Far East disturbed again so soon, and the principles of mediation and arbitration so recently aired at the Hague Conference might be placed before the disputants. There is abundant room for conjecture, but one thing is certain, namely, that the situation is full of danger. We can only hope that British statesmen are alive to the changed and changing conditions in the Far East, and will take care that the interests of Great Britain suffer nothing in the struggle for pre-eminence.

RUSSIA, CHINA, AND JAPAN.

A note from M. de Gizez warns China that an alliance with Japan will give great offence to Russia and that the consequences would be fraught with some peril to peace.

The Government's attitude, however, was one of patience and watchfulness.

T. D. BRODRICK, M.P., told the House of Commons yesterday that England had said that the peace of the Far East was disturbed again so soon, and the principles of mediation and arbitration so recently aired at the Hague Conference might be placed before the disputants. There is abundant room for conjecture, but one thing is certain, namely, that the situation is full of danger. We can only hope that British statesmen are alive to the changed and changing conditions in the Far East, and will take care that the interests of Great Britain suffer nothing in the struggle for pre-eminence.

There were 2 cases of plague yesterday and 2 deaths.
